Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission

Attn: Secretary
400 North Street
Harrisburg, PA 17120

To whom it may concern:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC or Commission) with comments regarding the regulations governing the PUC's Consumer Advisory Council. While these comments are made on behalf of myself, they are informed by the experiences that the Citizens Advisory Council to the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has had over many years of collaborative work with DEP on environmental law and policy issues facing the Commonwealth.

The Citizens Advisory Council to DEP is a statutorily-created Council that is charged with reviewing environmental laws of the Commonwealth and making appropriate suggestions regarding the revision, modification, or codification of those laws, and studying and advising DEP on its policies and work. The Citizens Advisory Council typically meets ten times per year to discuss topics ranging from karst geology to program funding issues. The Citizens Advisory Council also works with DEP on the development of regulations, policies, and permits, and will correspond with the General Assembly on environmental legislation. Additional information can be found on our website: <https://www.dep.pa.gov/PublicParticipation/CitizensAdvisoryCouncil/Pages/default.aspx>.

The key to the success of the Citizens Advisory Council has been the willingness of DEP staff at all levels to consistently engage the Council for meaningful input and to actively consider and debate the advice given by the Council. This professional open exchange of ideas fosters good government and well-vetted policies.

With that background, I offer the following comments on PUC's Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPR) on the regulations governing the Consumer Advisory Council:

General

First, I would like to recognize the importance of the Commission taking this action to improve the effectiveness of the Consumer Advisory Council. Meaningful consumer/citizen input is vital to the work agencies perform, and the Commission should be applauded for taking the time to address this issue. I, along with the Citizens Advisory Council membership, would be glad to offer any assistance needed as the Commission and Consumer Advisory Council proceed with the regulatory process.

Whether to Repeal Chapter 91 and Concomitantly Establish the Council via Commission Order

It has generally been the experience of the Citizens Advisory Council that being a statutorily-created council has not impeded the effectiveness of our Council or the value the Council adds to DEP's operations. Having council authorizations and membership requirements rooted in law offers a sense of permanency that encourages the development of long-term partnerships. Issues such as voting, quorum, and subcommittees, however, may benefit from additional flexibility. The bylaws of the Citizens Advisory Council, enclosed with this comments for your reference, address those and other administrative issues. Therefore, I recommend that vital council authority and composition provisions remain as a regulation in Chapter 91, but that discretion be given to administrative issues to increase flexibility.

Operational Efficiency of the Consumer Advisory Council

Bringing the Consumer Advisory Council up-to-date with the current configuration and structure of the PUC will, regardless of form, increase the efficiency and efficacy of the Council's work with PUC. The issues presented in the ANPR seem to be administrative concerns—such as filing Council actions—and therefore may benefit from being addressed in the bylaws of the Council where they can be more easily updated.

Information Sharing Between the Commission and the Consumer Advisory Council

As the Citizens Advisory Council has seen from its own experience, striking the appropriate balance between agency presentations and Council reports on consumer/citizen concerns can be tricky. The solution to that problem, however, does not lie in updates to or repeal of regulatory provisions. Some of that balance simply comes from current events—whether there are controversial or pressing issues facing the agency. Offering public comment opportunities during Council meetings can help spur discussion when there seems to be a lag in public engagement. Open lines of communication between the agency and the Council is the best way to ensure that the balance is attained to the maximum extent practicable.

The Consumer Advisory Council's Ability to File Comments with the Commission

The Council should be empowered and explicitly authorized to file comments in public proceedings before the Commission. The Citizens Advisory Council routinely files public comments on DEP rulemaking, policies, and permits under its statutory authority to advise and review DEP's operations. These comments provide DEP with a unique citizen-based, independent take on DEP's actions. The Consumer Advisory Council could benefit from this authority being explicitly provided in regulation, even though the Commission has allowed the Council to do so in the past.

The Diversity of Consumer Advisory Council Membership

I applaud the Commission for seeking input on ways to improve the representation on the Consumer Advisory Council. While I do not have direct experience regarding the stakeholder groups the Commission should consider, I can say that the Citizens Advisory Council has benefitted from having a geographically and professionally diverse membership.

Consumer Advisory Council Members Interaction with the Media or at Public Forums

The Council's approval should be the only prerequisite required before Council members speak publicly on behalf of the Council. This will ensure that the Council remains an independent voice of the consumer. The Commission and Council should strive to coordinate when public statements will be made, but the Council needs to be free to make public statements as it sees fit.

Ministerial Changes to the Council Including the Frequency of Council Meetings and Evaluating the Council's Composition

Regarding increasing the productivity of individual Council meetings, I recommend leaving the regulation as is and working with the Council and other stakeholders outside of the regulatory process to determine if there needs to be a reduction in the amount of Council meetings. Like the Consumer Advisory Council, the Citizens Advisory Council has a legal mandate to meet at least quarterly. Even though the requirement is typically exceeded, actions are not always taken at all meetings. Meeting attendance and actions are not always under the control of the agency and/or council and may be tied to current events.

Increasing Council membership and relaxing quorum rules for administrative tasks like approving meeting minutes could be an effective way to increase participation in Council meetings and to keep things moving. The Citizens Advisory Council allows members to teleconference in to general meetings to increase participation.

Regulatory provisions requiring the Council to select a Vice Chairperson and allowing the formation of subcommittees would help bolster the legitimacy of both the Vice Chairperson and the subcommittees. The Citizens Advisory Council addresses these topics in our bylaws, but they each flow from broad statutory authority regarding the work of our council. Given that the Consumer Advisory Council is established in regulation and not statute, it would be beneficial to formally recognize these specific actions.

I would again like to reiterate both my appreciation that the PUC is working to improve the effectiveness of the Consumer Advisory Council and the willingness of the Citizens Advisory Council to assist in any way we can in that endeavor. I can be reached by phone at 717-787-8171 or by email at ksalador@pa.gov if you have any questions or would like to discuss this issue further.

Sincerely,

In its advisory role to the Department of Environmental Protection, CAC will encourage such public participation and engagement to inform decision makers at the Department about critical public concerns involving environmental resources of the Commonwealth. As an element of the CAC's commitment to public participation and engagement, CAC will strive to ensure its accessibility and availability to the public and will provide a reasonable opportunity at each advertised meeting for the public to comment on matters of concern, including those issues for action or deliberation that are or may be before the CAC, prior to taking official action. If a CAC member is absent for three consecutive meetings and/or five of the ten regularly scheduled meetings in a calendar year, the CAC Chair will notify the member and discuss the situation; and upon the recommendation of the Chair, the

The CAC will not hesitate to discuss and debate the difficult issues inherent in the mission of the Department, but will endeavor to do so in a manner that facilitates the meaningful exchange of facts and potentially diverse viewpoints. To this end, CAC members are mutually committed to both actively participate and objectively listen, with the goal of seeking an improved understanding of the issues and developing effective solutions and recommendations.
